Risk Acknowledgement

Cryptocurrency and digital asset trading involves substantial risk and is highly volatile. Prices can fluctuate significantly in very short periods, and there is a real possibility you may lose some or all of your invested capital. You should carefully consider your investment objectives, level of experience, and risk tolerance before engaging in cryptocurrency trading.

Risks include (but are not limited to):

1. Market Risk – Rapid price swings and high volatility can cause sudden and significant losses.
2. Liquidity Risk – Certain cryptocurrencies may have low trading volumes, making it difficult to sell assets without substantial price impact.
3. Regulatory Risk – Laws and regulations governing cryptocurrencies can change at any time, potentially affecting legality, taxation, or accessibility.
4. Technology Risk – Vulnerabilities in exchanges, wallets, smart contracts, or blockchain networks can lead to hacking, theft, or loss of funds.
5. Counterparty Risk – Platforms and service providers may fail, become insolvent, or refuse withdrawals.

6. Psychological Risk – Emotional decision-making (fear, greed, panic) can result in poor trading outcomes.

You acknowledge and accept that past performance is not indicative of future results and that no signal, prediction, or analysis provided by us guarantees any profit or minimises the possibility of loss.
